COURSE INFORMATION

Course Overview and description: COMM 5321 - Essentials of Mass Media (3 credit hours)

This is a study of the ascension to power of the mass media and the current devices and practices used in the creation of a culture of online, and other media-based connections. Areas of study focus on religion & denominations, individualism, intellectualism, the Internet, races and cultures, political groups, ethical practices, science, education, the culture and economy of urban areas, etc.

Essentials of Mass Media is a study of mass media and the creation of a "Culture of online, and other media-based connections" - religions & denominations, individualism, intellectualism, the Internet, races and cultures, political groups, science, education, urban areas, etc. This course examines questions such as:

Do media sources manipulate political events, topics, and comments in order to lure higher numbers of "loyal followers"?

Are media sites fulfilling the needs of those concerned citizens who normally might not take the time to do the research necessary to find what they consider "the truth" about politicians and agendas?

Does a media site encourage conversation and expression of individual thought, or is it simply telling followers what they want to hear -- what they are comfortable with?

What role does marketing play in online sites with a political agenda (i.e. what products and ideologies are being sold as necessities)?

See the Instructor's Personal Statement at the end for more of an overview.

Students are expected to write brief reviews of chapters from the text, as well as from several germane journal articles and public media articles, in order to begin building a useful library of such sources. You will also participate actively in online discussions of the assigned readings and other exciting topics.

Finally, you will write a summation essay, discussing the chapters, articles, and research you have studied throughout the course, along with comparisons of policies you have chosen to highlight, and situations or genres in which they might apply. Since this is a graduate-level course the rigor is extensive, especially during the last weeks. Do not get behind, or you will not only lose points, but you may find that you have to drop the course.

Student Requirements
Examine and then question current media policies related to fairness & ethics.

Make intelligent observations about the benefits and shortcomings of weekly readings through both online discussions and in weekly reviews.

Collect and evaluate a library of sources concerning media involvement in political issues and ethics used in communication with public audiences, and through a variety of modes.

Course Objectives:

Student Learning Outcomes

Students will be able to differentiate between the common media methods of communication and reporting currently in use.

Students will select and highlight communication & media usage methods they choose as most harmful/useful, based on their personal experience, and research.

Students will select the media devices they feel best fit ethical approaches to public communication.

Students will develop the ability to blend forms of media communication to fit situations where one mode alone may not be sufficient to be effective.

Competency Goals

Students will read and respond, both in essay form and through written, online discussion, to a variety of communication and agenda-setting tactics, described in the text, and used for the creation of online cultures.

Students will read and respond, both in essay form and through written, online blog discussions, to a variety of media practices, described in journal articles they select and used in a variety of communication modes and situations.

Students will discover, and apply, their personal choices of the "correct" practices necessary for specific scenarios of communication situations.

Students will discover their personal philosophies for use in specific media communication situations, through reading, research, written reviews, and written discussion responses, and record those in essay format.

Required Reading and Textbook: Mass Communication: Living in a Media World (Hanson, ISBN: 9781544382999) and associated scholarly articles of your choice. Our text also has some very good review tools included at the end of each chapter as follows: Chapter Review, Chapter Summary, Key Terms, and Review Questions. For strategic reading you might want to look over the Review Questions before beginning to read. These questions feature points the author feels are important knowledge from each chapter, which also helps you focus on a specific topic for your writing and discussion assignments each week.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS

Course Requirements: (Use MLA guidelines on all the writing that you turn in. All work must be in Microsoft Word format. Also, as a rule, I do not accept late assignments, without prior approval.)

Combined Chapter & Article Reviews: You will compose fourteen (14) combined reviews of chapters from Mass Communication: Living in a Media World, and fourteen (14) journal/media articles of your choice. Each combined review will address the specific media tactic or practice you chose to investigate from each chapter in the text, along with a journal article that correlates with that topic from the text. Review that chapter and article in 400-600 words. (Example: Chapter Review + Article Review = 1 Review) For each review, begin with an MLA heading, the bibliographic information for text and article (MLA style), and a concise summary 200-300 words) about a specific topic in each chapter you single out that is of great importance within the study of Mass Media Culture. Address its usefulness to you and its general strengths and weaknesses. You are not required to address the entire chapter, only a specific point, or points, you cite as most important. Please supply short scenarios, if necessary, to illustrate your application of the practice. Use Microsoft Word format Only. Each Article Review is worth fifty (50) points. (Examples are in the "Pages" tab.)

Discussion Participation: In addition, you are expected to contribute to the course discussions each week. Count on providing at least one substantive original comment each of the fourteen (14) weeks about your readings or in response to my questions. Also included are comments you post as responses to others’ posts. Each week you are required to post responses to at least two of your classmates’ comments. Grades are not assigned to specific posts, but your contributions each week are worth twenty-five (25) points. In addition to the discussion of readings, the discussion provides a forum for other course questions and comments. Please check the Discussion Board often to see what your classmates are asking or commenting on. You might be able to help. Grades for this section will be collected and posted each week. Discussion is important to any course, and an online course is no different. Each participant’s comments and points of view are essential to gaining knowledge about any subject or topic, and I put quite a bit of weight on active discussion. Comments should be substantive and should be made early in the week so that active discussion can take place. Students making comments in the final minutes or hours of the discussion window will not get full credit for participation/discussion.

Final Essay: This will be an essay that gives you yet another opportunity to ponder the ideas of how media addresses cultural needs, changes, and values. You will write a summation essay, discussing the media practices you have studied throughout the course, comparisons of practices you have chosen to highlight, and communication situations, scenarios, or genres, in which they might apply. This is a very substantive assignment and should reflect your critical insight into agenda-setting, and other methods that can be manipulated by media to fit specific situations. The average length of these papers has been 2000-2500 words, but feel free to go longer if necessary. (I really do not like limits, but some students feel they are necessary.) This final assignment is worth 500 points.

A Note about Sexual Violence at A&M-Central Texas

Sexual violence is a serious safety, social justice, and public health issue. The university offers support for anyone struggling with these issues. University faculty are mandated reporters, so if someone discloses that they were sexually assaulted (or a victim of Domestic/Dating Violence or Stalking) while a student at TAMUCT, faculty members are required to inform the Title IX Office. If you want to discuss any of these issues confidentially, you can do so through Student Wellness and Counseling (254-501-5955) located on the second floor of Warrior Hall (207L).

Sexual violence can occur on our campus because predators often feel emboldened, and victims often feel silenced or shamed. It is incumbent on ALL of us to find ways to actively create environments that tell predators we don’t agree with their behaviors and tell survivors we will support them. Your actions matter. Don’t be a bystander; be an agent of change. For additional information on campus policy and resources visit the Title IX webpage [https://www.tamuct.edu/compliance/titleix.html].

Behavioral Intervention

Texas A&M University-Central Texas cares about the safety, health, and well-being of its students, faculty, staff, and community. If you are aware of individuals for whom you have a concern, please make a referral to the Behavioral Intervention Team. Referring your concern shows you care. You can complete the referral online [https://cm.maxient.com/reportingform.php?TAMUCentralTexas&layout_id=2].

Anonymous referrals are accepted. Please see the Behavioral Intervention Team website for more information [https://www.tamuct.edu/bit]. If a person’s behavior poses an imminent threat to you or another, contact 911 or A&M-Central Texas University Police at 254-501-5800.
