

Shelter-In-Place Procedures

Chemical, biological, or radiological contaminants may be released into the environment in such quantity and/or proximity to the university that it is safer to remain indoors rather than to evacuate students, faculty, staff, and visitors.

Examples of situations that might result in a decision to institute "shelter-in-place" include:

- An explosion in a nearby facility that releases chemicals
- A derailed and leaking tank car of chlorine from a rail line near the university
- A severe weather event such as a tornado or severe thunderstorm

"Shelter-in-place" means selecting a room or rooms within the facility, ideally with no or few windows, and taking refuge there. In many cases, local authorities will issue advice to shelter-in-place via TV or radio, and the university may send a SafeZone text message and/or email.

In the event of a tornado or severe thunderstorm, you should seek out a shelter-in-place location that is on the lowest floor possible. If you do not have time to get to a lower floor, choose the closest shelter-in-place location and try to get under a desk or table.

The following maps indicate all the rooms in each building that have been designated as shelter-in-place locations. Please take a few minutes to identify the shelter-in-place rooms closest to where you are typically located.

PLEASE NOTE: Shelter-In-Place locations may or may not be sufficient in the event of a LOCK-DOWN situation on campus. If the Shelter-In-Place location does not have a lock or the ability to barricade the entrance it should NEVER be used in a lock-down situation.
